Richard A. Klein

Who the Hell is Richard Klein and Who Cares? is a rollicking celebration of the adventures and misadventures of Richard Klein from birth through the present. And what adventures they were: from kamikaze bombing of Philadelphia at the height of World War II, to an all too successful hoax in convincing the sports world that the Kansas City Athletics were possibly moving to New Jersey; his creation of a successful line of birthday and greeting card records in collaboration with Joan Rivers and Rod McKuen; to his consulting work with A&E and his role in launching the Dr. Ruth show; to his pioneering work in using the National Film Archives for commercial purposes; to his role as a "Pontiff Goniff" selling papal commemorative jewelry and medals – it's all here for your amusement, recorded for posterity.
